APR 21 1924

Description.

This motion picture is an animated picture made with miniature characters and sets. The characters are made with moveable joints and are capable of imitating the movements of the human body. In the picture they are named Prof. Gobs and Mr. B. Oodles and his daughter Betty Oodles.

In the action of the picture Prof. Gobs gets out of bed clad in pajamas and goes through a number of comic stunts exercising and walking around. He is visited by Mr. B. Oodles who quarrels with him about his daughter visiting the studio too often. Betty the daughter calls after her father is gone, and makes loves with Gobs who invites her for a ride in his airship. A number of scenes cover their comic action in the airship. After the return from the ride, Betty and Gobs dance to the music of a miniature phonograph, while Mr. Oodles is hiding behind a screen. He is discovered and takes Betty out after attempting to catch Prof. Gobs.
